SOMMELIER'S INTRODUCTION

Wine is often described through aroma and flavor, yet its true expression reveals itself across multiple dimensions.

The first two dimensions of wine are width and length. Width speaks to the range of flavors and textures present at first impression — fruit, earth, spice, and minerality unfolding across the palate. Length is how long those sensations persist, the clarity and persistence of flavor that remains after each sip.

The third dimension is depth. This is discovered at the finish, as the wine continues to evolve rather than simply fade. New layers emerge — subtler aromas, secondary notes, and a sense of dimension that rewards attention and patience. Depth is what separates a well-made wine from a truly compelling one.

The fourth dimension is time. It is the moment when wine transcends structure and becomes personal — when a flavor recalls a place, a season, or a memory. Time is shaped not only by the wine's age or evolution in the glass, but by the experiences and emotions of the person enjoying it.

This wine list has been curated to explore all four dimensions. Within these pages are wines chosen not only for their reputation or pedigree, but for their ability to reveal themselves gradually, offering both immediate pleasure and lasting resonance.

We invite you to explore thoughtfully, to linger with wines that reward curiosity, and to discover those rare bottles that speak beyond the palate — into memory and time.

With our best regards,

Harry Constantinescu
